Arsenal Technical High School

Indianapolis, Indiana

Here's the Tech perspective . . .

From far away Arsenal Technical High School is seen as a bustling mass, a great conglomeration of all kinds of people, each swiftly passing by, lost in a grayness of routines and rules. But, moving up on the scene, coming closer to the school, the onlooker finds that each of the 4800 pupils is an individual with distinct problems, personal emotions, unique merits.

Take a closer look at tradition

The century-old Arsenal Tower has seen innumerable teenagers wander onto the Tech campus, awed by its enormity and its vast loneliness. It has witnessed the miraculous change of these Techites from bewildered freshmen to self-confident seniors in a short four years.

At the opening of school, a quick tour of the campus made known the points of interest to each oncoming "freshie." Later, the newcomer realized the true spirit of Tech in a simple smile, a nod of recognition, a genial hello.

He studied, participated and matured, and became one of the tens of thousands who proudly call Tech their alma mater.

He supported the Tech name in his unique way, at a school where stately tradition and history combined with the spirit of youth.

Right above: The Magazine, often unknown to Tech pupils, was built in 1865 to house ammunition for the United States Army. Around the building mounds of dirt were piled for safety in case of an explosion. To keep the powder dry, the walls were built in two separate thicknesses.

Now all ROTC members from seven Indianapolis high schools visit the magazine to be issued their uniforms. Any ROTC supplies needed are found in this building located for block on the campus.

Behind the mechanics of daily routine came the excitement of discovery — why sodium and chloride make salt, how to repair an airplane engine, and what a radical is. Pupils grew through the exchange of ideas and the guidance of teachers.

activities

For the intelligent, the talented or the merely interested, Tech offered a multitude of extra-curricular activities to spatter the background of classes with animated colors. Opportunities for self-expression flourished on the 76-acre campus as Techites participated in all-school plays, art competitions, the annual Sketchbook, athletic contests, speech meets, and student council.

The Techite, breaking out of the comfortable walls of detachment into positions of leadership, won the honor and respect of his peers. From the many problems solved, came understanding and perception to face the decisions of the future.

personal recognition

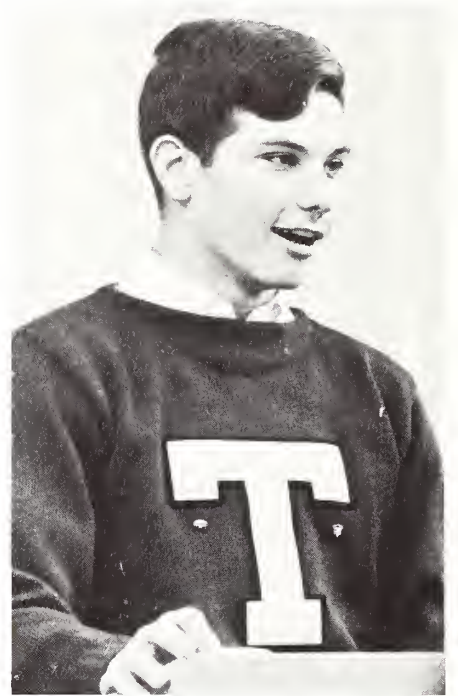

To the freshman gazing through the Michigan Streetgate, apprehensive of beginning one of the most important eras of his life, four years loomed ahead like an eternity. When that same gate closed on the graduates after commencement, he saw those years as a swiftly passing memory.

During his high school life, he had striven for recognition in scholastic, athletic, or personal achievement. He had added to the honors amassed by his predecessors.

In facing the problems of approaching adulthood, he had sought out companionship to share the moods, memories, and hopes for the future with passing acquaintances and life-long friends alike.

He had fulfilled his hopes of success, had become known on campus, no longer fighting a world of anonymity. He had grown as an individual, a vital, active member of Tech.

Prepared by academic classes, vocational courses, extra-curricular activities and the experiences of co-existing with others, the Techite draws from the past to prepare for the future.

Seen from the top of the Arsenal Tower, Indianapolis and the world beyond beckon to Tech for tomorrow's teachers, businessmen, secretaries, laborers, homemakers, and leaders. Arsenal Technical High School always strives to meet this challenge.

At five year intervals different types of stones are added to the pin. Marking a ten year period is a pearl, twenty-five years a bright green stone, and forty years or retirement a royal blue stone. The service pin is a tribute to members of the faculty, symbolic of their hard work and loyalty.

Presenting

administration and staff

Howard L. Longshore

Administrators consider problems of school, pupils

From the most imposing and tradition-filled building on campus, Tech's Arsenal, the administration directed the high school's activities. In charge of matters of general importance to Tech, the vice-principals worked under Principal Howard Longshore. The directors' jobs were more specialized with activities ranging from guidance to athletics, while Tech's counselors provided the link between the school and its pupils. Keeping the work coordinated was the task of the office staff and departmental assistants.

Tech's Evening School Division, with an enrollment of about 3,000, is directed by Vice-principal James Stewart.

Many boys are seen daily by Vice-principal Herman Hinshaw for discipline and counsel.

James Borshoff directs guidance for the Evening Schaal Division.

As the audio-visual director, G. Kenneth Barr takes care of films, tapes and recorders used in classes.

Presentations of awards, scheduling of games, cheerleader activities, and the "Titan 300" are the responsibilities of Charles Dagwell, athletic director.

Amid piles of books, Miss Mary Garst, Mrs. Dorothy Newcamer and Miss Marjorie Schoch, head librarian, work steadily to keep Tech students informed.

Wallace Potter deals with Special Education and with students with outstanding scholastic talents.

keeps directors busy

Although composed of 4800 individual parts, the student body was considered one unit by the directors who were concerned with the general functions of the school. Problems affecting everyone at Tech, from campus cleaning to the public image of the school were handled by various directors. The directors of student activities—scholastic extra-curricular and athletic—guided pupils' school-related social life. Evening School Division served the Tech community and was led by one of the Arsenal-based directors. Managing the school's publicity through the Cannon weekly and yearbook was the job which fell to the director of publications.

Dean of Boys Donald Daily and his assistant, Mahlan Carlack, are responsible for discipline and correction.

Deans, counselors advise on present, future plans

Focusing on the individual, Tech's deans and counselors advised pupils on matters ranging from next year's classes to discipline and correction.

The adjustment from junior high to high school life was the first problem faced by counselors. Future plans—whether for higher education, military service or a vocation—and the foundations for these plans concerned other workers in the guidance field.

Pupils with attendance or discipline problems were referred to the dean of boys, the dean of girls, and their assistants who were in charge of correction.

The National Teachers Corps strove to help Tech pupils with scholastic problems achieve a better education.

Assistants handle clerical chores

Operating a school as large as Tech was a major undertaking, and much of the work was done by office staffs and assistants.

The staffs of day school and Evening Division handled the clerical work for over 8000 Tech pupils.

The teacher aides and departmental assistants helped to relieve the load of paper work on teachers and department heads.

The Social Service staff aided needy pupils while the Bookstore staff helped to keep pupils furnished with necessary supplies.

Cafeteria feeds 3,000 Titans daily

Did you know that one large cow, 12 pounds of government lard, 112 pounds of government flour, 8 pounds of powdered milk, 3 pounds of salt, 4 pounds of dried eggs, 3 pounds and 4 ounces of yeast, and 9 gallons of water keep the Tech spirit alive? The cow is picked from the cream of the crop to serve the lunching Titans. In fact, the Tech cafeteria could be called the hamburger haven of the world.

Through calculations, the cafeteria staff approximated that Tech students consume 2,977 hamburgers in one day.

Tech students feast upon the finest pure-bred cow on the market—400 pounds of it in a day to be exact! It is shipped to us in 25 pound bags of hamburger to be mixed with thousands of grains of salt, pepper, and monosodium glutamate. After the patties are cooked, they meet their partners in business—THE BUNS. A pass through the warming oven, then brings them to the end of the line—just to be devoured by ravenous students.

'English is the Key to Living'

New ideas sharpened the aims of the English Department.

Through use of the tape recorder, speech pupils heard clearer speech patterns. Dramatics and debate played a major role in building confidence and skill. Films of Macbeth offered cultural enrichment to English

VIII pupils.

On the practical side, projects enlivened classes. Some pupils made Christmas cards to soldiers in Vietnam. Other potential writers found self-expression by participating in a paragraph contest on "English is the Key to Living."

English III, V, and VII classes used the facilities of the library to prepare research papers.

In an effort to improve instruction, teachers participated in a series of demonstrations on the teaching of paragraph development.

Mathematics figures all angles

With John Stoeckinger as the new department head this year, the mathematics classes continued to modernize. Classes ranging from General Math I to Analytic Geometry, Business Math to Astronomy prepared pupils for college careers or future occupations.

Linguists 'go places' even staying at home

Sprinklings of different dialects and accents pattered through the corridors of the Tech Foreign Language Department as pupils got acquainted with new equipment. Portable headsets in regular classrooms were a new device for students of French, Spanish, and German. Classes prepared the pupils for fundamental work in grammar and conversation and then advanced into literature. Latin also offered basic cultural advantages.

Classes span continents, centuries

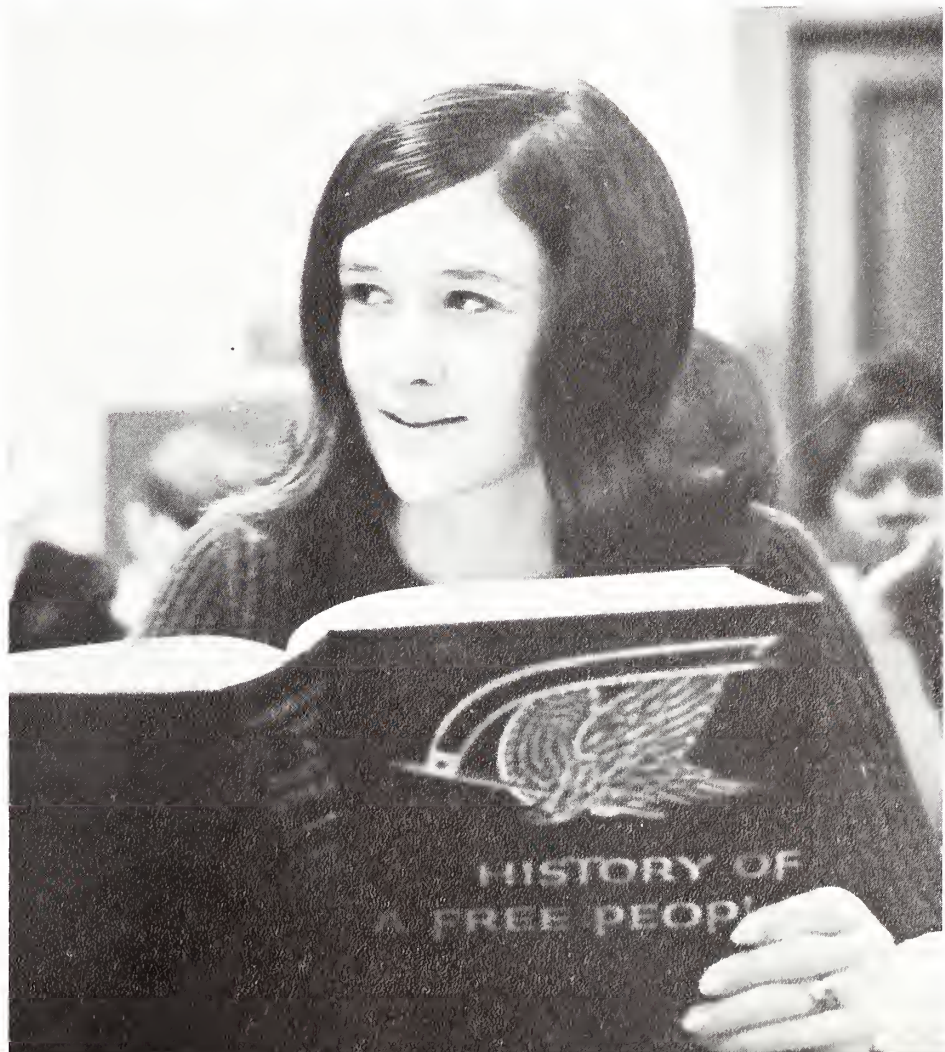

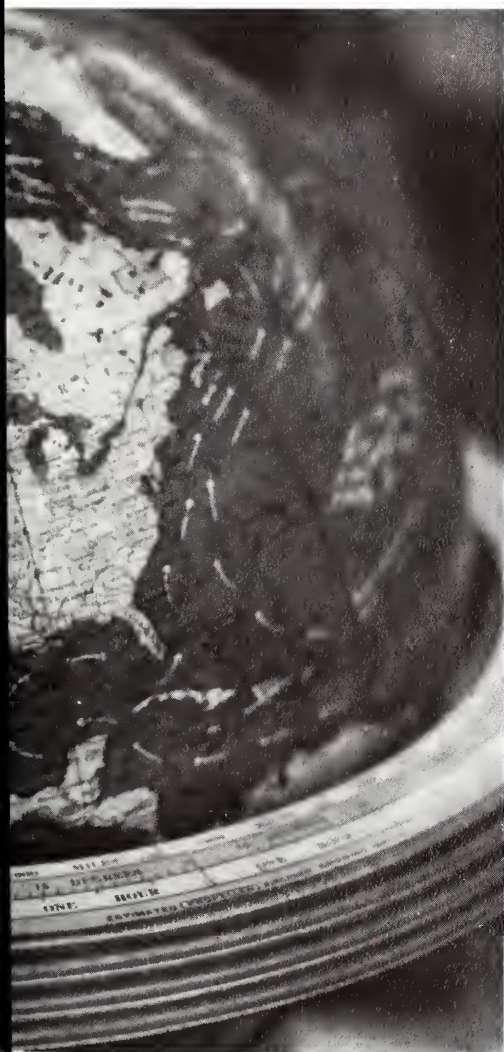

A state-required pre-election unit was stressed this year by the Social Studies Department, and Tech history pupils participated in many election activities. Typical campaign displays with posters and pamphlets were set up in Treadwell Hall. Some pupils conducted voter surveys while others worked at the polls in their precincts. Mock ballots were taken to preview election night results.

Throughout election week, history classes received an intensive course on the democratic system with emphasis on political leaders of both parties at the national, state, and local levels.

Life is probed pondered, perpetuated

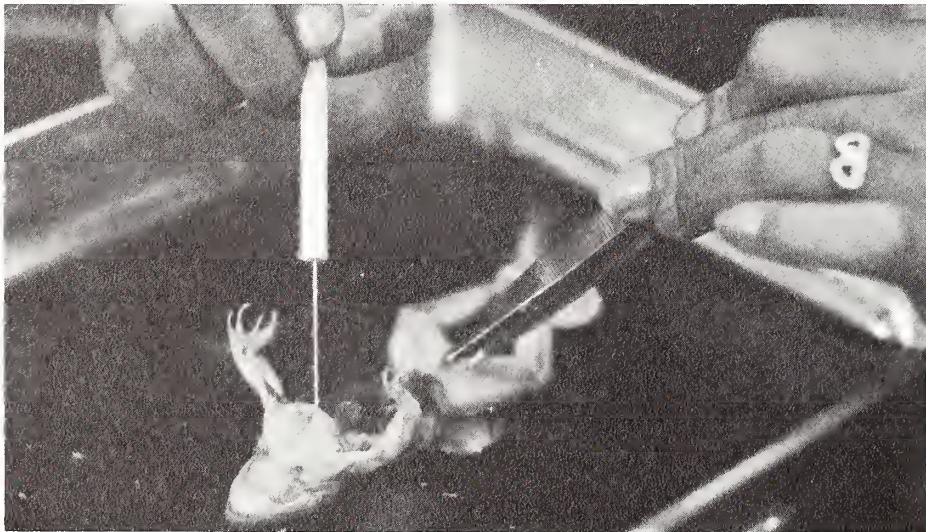

The renovation of the Barn, preparing it for scientific use, continued to be the big project for the Biological Science Department. The animal room in the basement was equipped by building trades classes which developed the ventilating and plumbing systems.

A culture room for lower plants and animals was developed to make the study of protozoa and algae possible. Higher plants were studied in the greenhouse. New demonstration desks, tile floors, and fluorescent lights were installed.

Other new equipment included a bacteriology microscope, an overhead projector and duplicate models and charts.

Physical scientists explore laser beam

General science, earth science, chemistry, and physics were taught to the 1,000 pupils enrolled in the Physical Science Department.

The department was proud of the addition of a new piece of electronic equipment, a laser. Tech thus became one of a few privileged high schools to own one. The device, a model of the machine used to bounce light beams off the moon, was used by pupils in Physics II and Advanced Physics for grading and diffraction of light rays.

Mr. Beeson and Mr. Tozer conducted experiments to explore its possibilities. Further discussion is given on page 39.

When mother and father were younger, they went to the movies to see their hero, Flash Gordon, possessor of a disintegrator. Then, space travel and ray guns were dreams of man's mind; today they are reality.

The disintegrating gun of today is an electronic device called a laser. By means of ruby rods and flash tubes or gas, it produces a beam of coherent light of one frequency, that is, one whose waves are in phase with one another. Now in the experimental stage, the laser will be put to many practical and scientific uses. One of these is the making of holograms. (A hologram negative made the picture shown below.)

Op art? No, the whorls, blabs and specks shown below are a photograph printed from a photograph negative, but different from other negatives because the picture was not taken with a camera. Instead, in a dark room the film was exposed to a laser beam in a project under the direction of Mr. Beesan, and the result was the hologram negative used to make the positive print shown here. In actual use the laser would be projected through the negative and would result in an actual 3-D image in space, not a picture on a plane. Only the negative has the odd op-art appearance.

"Home Economics Adds Up To" . . . was the theme of the Home Economics Department this year. To finish this sentence, various courses were offered. In clothing classes girls learned to design and choose clothes best suited for them. Cosmetology taught make-up and hairstyles as a part of good grooming. Young cooks concocted everything from to snacks, to full course dinners. Millinery classes created headwear and stuffed animals. Seniors learned of the problems of married life in family living classes.

Students display business skills

To keep up with the demands of the business world for trained typists, bookkeepers, clerical workers, secretaries, and key punch operators, the Tech Business Education Department, headed by Miss Mona Woodard, offers "job-training courses in those skills that add up to economic competence."

Outstanding pupils qualified for awards in typewriting at 30 words per minute, shorthand at 60 words per minute, and in filing. The outstanding senior business major was presented the F. H. Gillespie Award at Supreme Day. In addition to a vocational certificate in bookkeeping and secretarial training, plans were made to offer certificates in data processing in the near future.

This year five teachers were added to the staff.

Uniforms, opera make music news

Special events of the Music Department's year included the arrival of new band uniforms and the presentation of Amahl and the Night Visitors.

After years of untiring efforts and great anticipation, Tech band members received new uniforms. Faces lit up with broad smiles as the bright, new outfits were unpacked in time for football games and parades.

Something new and different happened at this year's Christmas assembly. Amahl and the Night Visitors provided Techites with a new view of the many assets of the Music Department.

Special training in music theory and directing gave interested students a chance to broaden their abilities.

Health classes meet varied needs

The dream of becoming a driver turns to reality as Donald Faust learns the skills needed in the driver education trailer.

Plush bucket seats and modern "select-shift" transmission made a description of the new driver education trailer in the Health and Physical Education Department sound like an advertisement for a 1967 car.

Replacing an older model, the new facility automatically indicated errors as they occurred to make possible immediate correction. Improvements were made in the seating arrangement so that the 12 pupils could have a better view of the screen. The new movie projector simulated driving situations to test pupil reactions which were registered on the instrument panel.

Also included in the Health and Physical Education Department were gym classes for girls and boys, classes in alcohol education, and special sight-saving classes for the visually handicapped.

Auto mechanics puts wheels in their heads

Most teen-age boys are fascinated by cars and their mechanics. The Auto Trades Department offered a chance to learn more about the fascinating subject, and 800 boys were enrolled in auto mechanics and auto body. Actual work on cars gave pupils an insight into jobs as auto mechanics, specialty mechanics, shop foremen or parts managers. This year the department acquired new automatic transmission equipment. Aviation mechanics also was included in the curriculum.

Drafting, printing offer training for skilled jobs

With the addition of Electron II, the Tech Printing Department, the largest of its kind in Indiana, also becomes the most modern. Only one other high school in the country uses this most advanced linotype machine.

Printing pupils must have a basic knowledge of physics, chemistry, math, art and design. After about two years of study, the pupils are allowed to run the entire print shop and develop qualities of leadership, initiative, and responsibility.

Printing has so many varied fields that innumerable job opportunities are available for Tech pupils upon graduation.

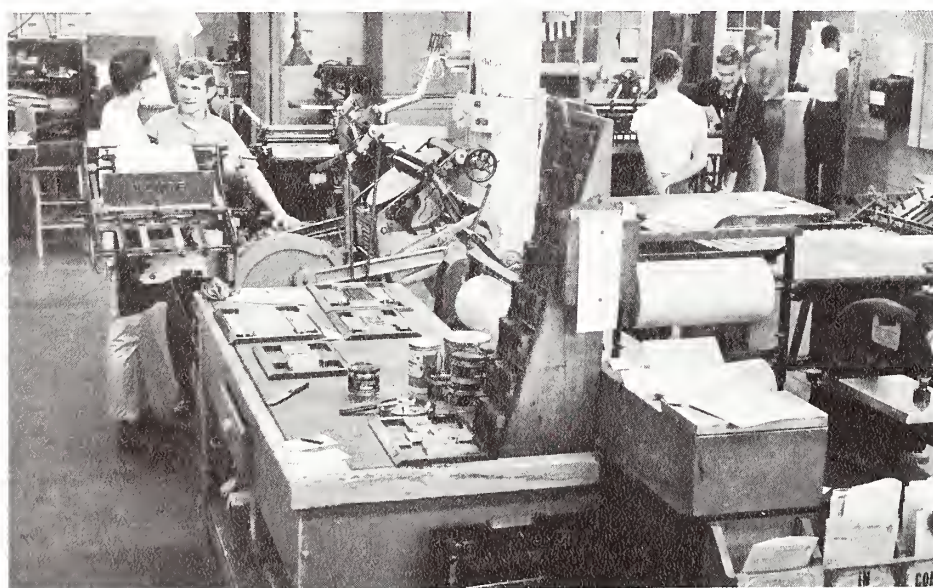

Pupils enrolled in the Drafting Department learn that drafting has played an important part in bringing many ideas into reality. With courses ranging from mechanical drawing to advanced drafting, the pupils project themselves and learn from practical experience.

Starting the semester with an enrollment of 700, teachers and department heads began a remodeling program, installing new and more advanced equipment including the Vemco V-track drafting machine.

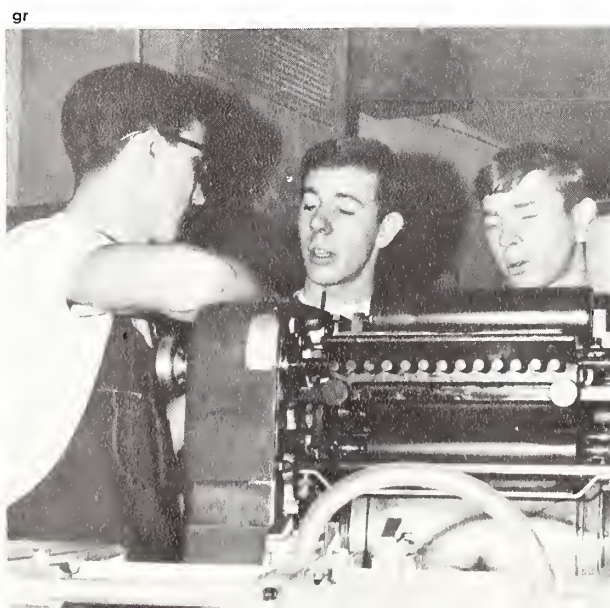

One class project was a home development plan where the pupils plotted the roads and designed and positioned the houses.

The Building Trades Department is important to over 500 students. It operates with seven teachers, teaching thirty-nine classes a day in carpentry, cabinet making, plumbing, masonry, painting and decorating.

The students work two or four periods a day. Not only did the boys prepare for the future, but they did jobs of present importance such as putting in sidewalks, finishing cabinets, applying exterior finishes, painting classrooms, and installing drainage systems in order to improve and beautify the Tech campus.

Metal trades pupils cast lot in industry

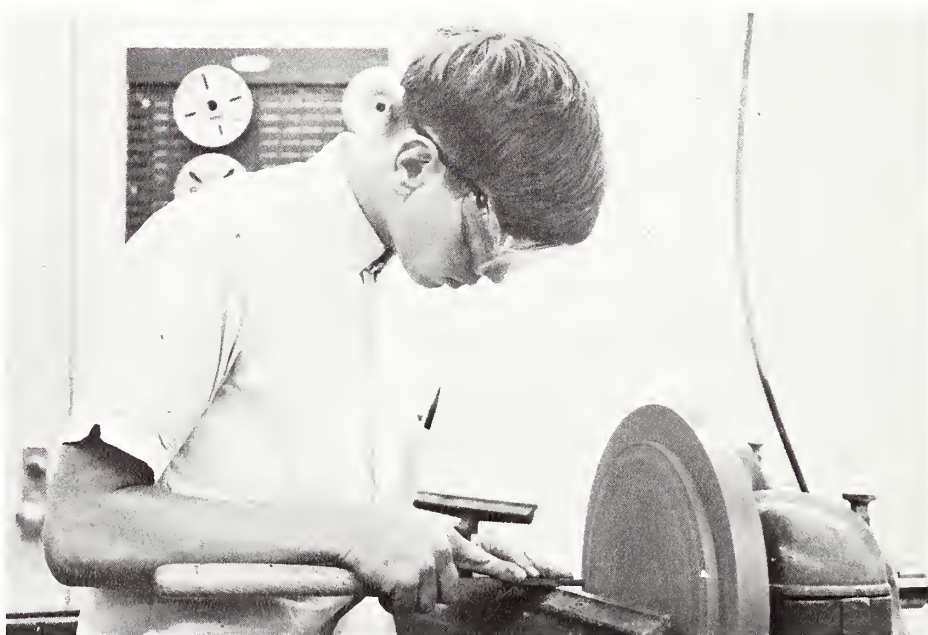

Without trained workers in the five major fields of metal trades, space capsules, automobiles, and vacuum sweepers would be non-existent.

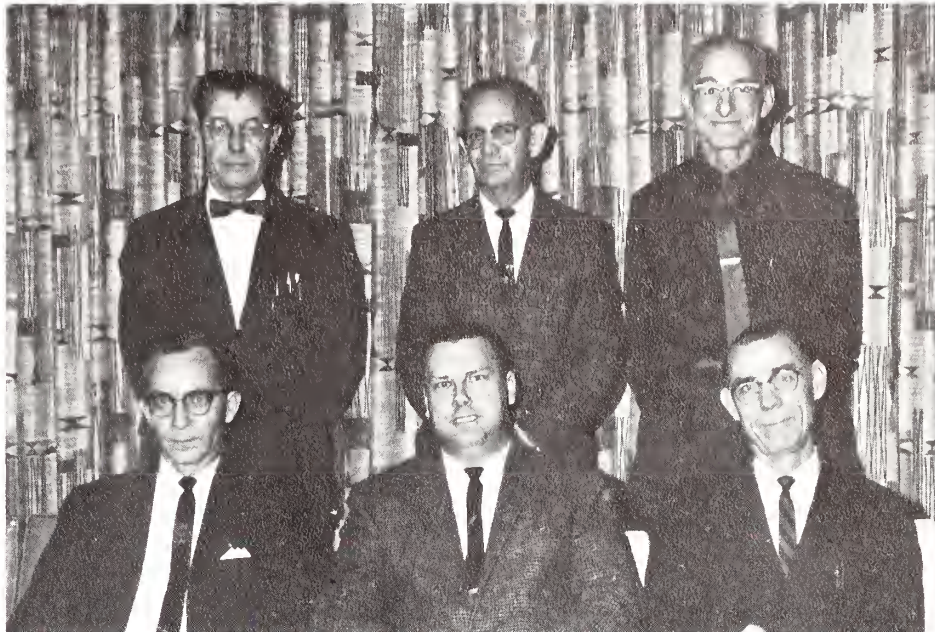

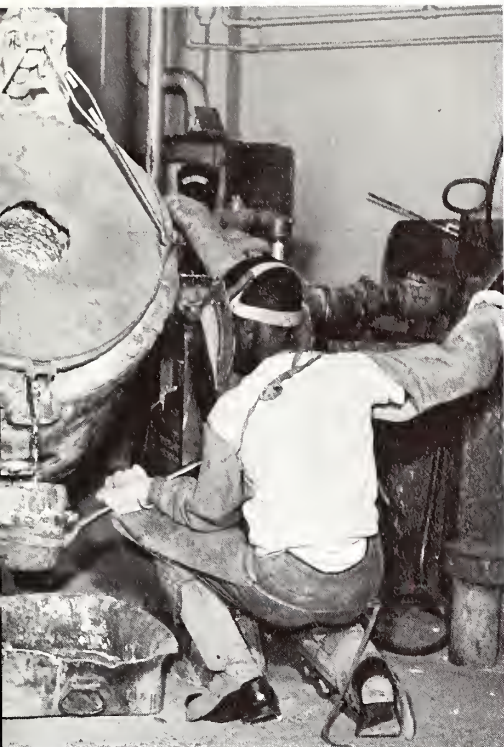

The Tech Metal Trades Department classes in pattern making, sheet metal, welding, foundry and machine shop used new machinery recently installed to keep methods and techniques up-to-date.

The demand for metal workers has tripled in the last few years; salaries are high and are continuing to rise, according to Norman Brinker, department head.

Did you ever stop to think that maybe the men who repair your radio or television set were graduates of Tech's Electrical Trades Department?

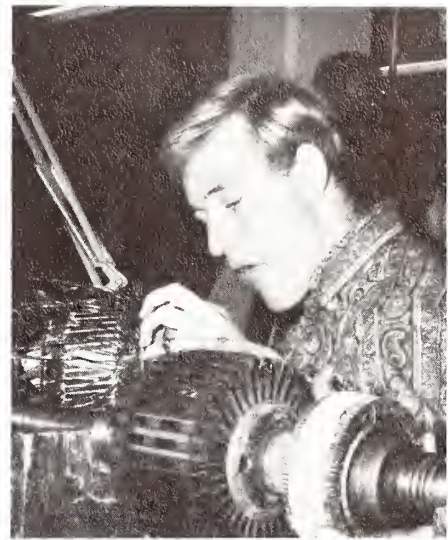

This is only one of the four basic areas of vocational and technical training. The radio and TV course prepared the student for entry into this service trade. Refrigeration prepared the student for a job in the area of domestic or commercial refrigeration and air conditioning, and electricity prepared him for electrical construction and industrial plant electrical maintenance. Electronics, a new program started this year, covered the basic electronic circuits and their testing procedures which are used for a multiplicity of applications in commercial, industrial, and domestic equipment.

Speech and debate meant more than just rounds of dramatic, humorous, or poetic presentation. The experience introduced members to new friends and gave them many memories. Deadline met; yearbookers fulfill aim

Yearbook staffers didn't get time and a half for overtime, but they did realize their ambition of seeing ideas take tangible form in the 1967 yearbook. Working with adviser Miss Jones, copywriters, photographers, and editors contributed their talents and kept Room 638 busy, often after school hours. Staff teamwork pays off producing Cannon weekly Keeping Cannon wheels rolling are Mrs. Betty Rowland, secretary; Cecil T. Tresslor, director of publications; Bernice Jones, yearbook adviser.

The clock on the Cannon Office wall says 11:07. Page three is due at the print shop in eight minutes, yet there are still five headlines to be written, the lead story has been misplaced, and the page editor discovers a glaring 7-inch hole in the page dummy that must be filled.

It is now what teamwork pays off, as three Cannon "kiddies" set about scribbling headline possibilities on the chalkboard, two others decipher and re-type copy, and still another leaves to get information for a story to fill the 7-inch hole. A student from the print shop brings in a wet page proof to be checked for errors. Two more staffers read proof, discovering too late that they can also read the page from their ink-strained arms. This is the scene during a normal day in room 638, Cannon Office.

Spelunking Techites go 'batty'

For setting up an organized functioning body of active high school students, the prerequisites are simple. The activity must be entertaining; it must have educational qualities in keeping with the goals of the school; it should be helpful in the student's social development.

The Natural Science Club with its 75 active members, has enjoyed a varied program visiting the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago and swimming in Lake Sullivan at 50 degrees during a trip to Sullivan Cave. Enhancing the educational aspects of the club, members toured Allison's plant in January.

Looking on the lighter side, members were active in party preparation at Christmas time.

Mr. Simmons has been the club sponsor ever since its origin. Its true meaning was made evident to everyone in his statement, "The club is organized not merely for pursuit of science, although we do go to places of scientific interest. We organized a social club with scientific orientation. Ability to get along with one another is just as important as formal learning."

Also sharing in a cave trip expedition was the Chemistry-Physics Club, under the sponsorship of Mr. Beeson and Mr. Tozer. Adding to their festivities, the students worked on separate science projects, learned the proper use of a slide rule and learned the functions of a laser. For the Mardi Gras, the club constructed a miniature planetarium.

Looking with anticipation to their guest speakers, their visits to various points of interest to the students, and their club picnic at the end of school, the XYZ Club members were bubbling with enthusiasm. Besides participating in the Mardi Gras, the club also held its yearly May tea to honor all the math teachers, club members and their parents.

Techoir, Melodayres entertain

The Madrigal Singers, with a new sponsor, Mrs. Sandra Fanning, and a new name, the Melodayres, filled numerous outside singing engagements. These sixteen selected boys and girls entertained at school activities such as the Homecoming dance and the Christmas assembly.

The Techoir, under the direction of William Moon and accompanied by Mrs. Fanning, sang many times this year. School assemblies at Thanksgiving and Easter were settings for special programs for the Techoir. They appeared Christmas caroling at the governor's mansion, the City-County Building, and downtown department stores. They cut a Christmas record and telecast a special holiday show. A party topped off the year's activities.

Vocal groups put Tech in spotlight

Tech vocal groups chalked up a colorful year.

Fresh and new could have described Tech's Girls Concert Club in 1966 under new director, Mrs. Sandra Fanning. The girls joined with the Techoir and the Boys Concert Club at the Thanksgiving assembly and with the Girls Ensemble and the Melodayres for the special Christmas concert.

The girls changed the traditional uniforms of dark skirts and white blouses for new green wool dresses.

With Mrs. Phyllis Safman, as their new sponsor, 12 girls combined their voices to continue the reputation of the Girls Ensemble. They performed at the Homecoming dance and at the Christmas and Easter assemblies.

The Boys Concert Club joined the choir in the gymnasium when the opera, Amahl and the Night Visitors, was presented. After the play, the boys caroled at school and downtown on the Circle. On April 28, they participated in the All-City Boys Concert Festival. The annual spring concert was held in the Forum and combined the Girls and Boys Concert Clubs. To end the year the boys had a spring picnic on campus.

The Boys Octette staged about 35 programs during the year. The Octette performed at other schools, dinners and conventions. The group appeared on television December 19 with the Techoir on a special half-hour program. On December 22, the Octette caroled on the mall of the Greenwood Shopping Center. The annual banquet was held in the spring for this year's Octette, new members and alumni.

Orchestral groups make headlines

As pupils entered the Boys Gym for this year's all-school assemblies, the big boom of Tech's orchestra set the pace for a spirited ceremonial occasion. Directed by Mr. Brandes, the musicians played "Officer of the Day" for the presentation of the American flag.

The orchestra performed with the band at the annual spring concert April 21.

The Tech String Ensemble performed for school activities, including the Senior Parents' Reception, and accommodated outside engagements in their schedule.

Tech musicians parade in hard-earned uniforms

With a roll of drums the Tech Band stepped out onto the field wearing new green and white uniforms. First displayed during half-time shows at football games, they added zest and color to the performance.

Members had earned money for the purchase by selling candy and serving in the cafe at the Mardi Gras.

Fans chanted cheers of encouragement to the accompaniment of the pep band at all basketball games. Quiet settled over the gym at the presentation of the colors in pre-game ceremonies.

Not only was the organization a marching band, but a concert band as well. Keeping up with tradition, they presented a spring concert in conjunction with the orchestra, playing selections ranging from show tunes to classics.

Janet Hicks enjoys the adventure of learning new skills on her DCE job as long distance operator at Indiana Bell Telephone Company.

Techites interested in learning skilled occupations applied for jobs through Diversified Cooperative Education. In learning and working at their tasks they obtained school credits, one for the related class, and one in the department to which the job applied. Hardworking pupils got positions at such industries as Eli Lilly's, Stokely-Van Camp, Indiana Bell Telephone Company, and Community Hospital. Lab technicians, long distance operator, nurses' aid, printer, and data processor were only some of the jobs offered. The twenty-two teens participating worked mornings or afternoons.

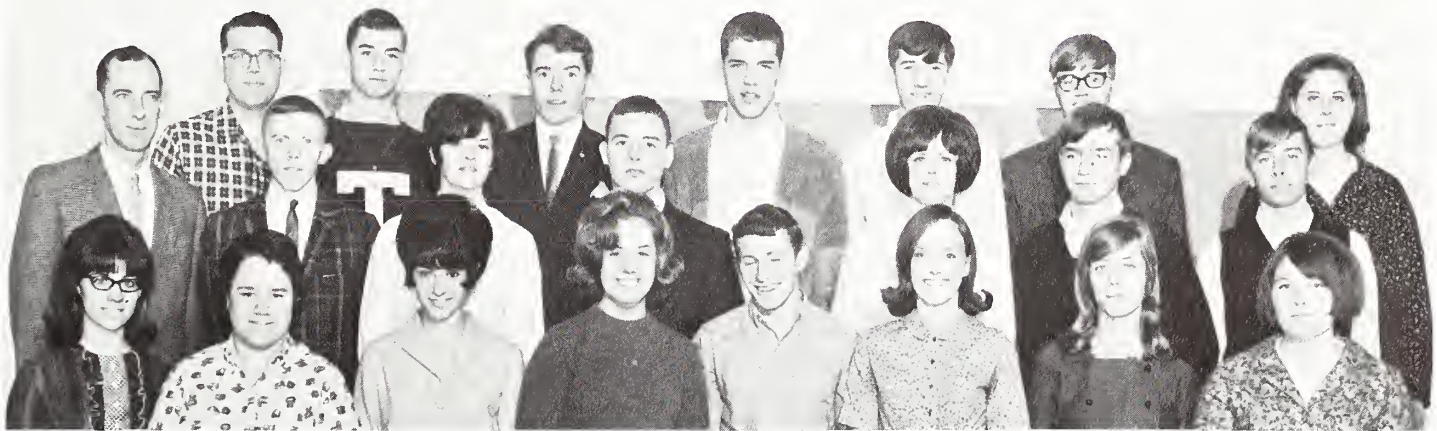

Past inspires; future beckons

Helping those younger than themselves, Tech seniors found exploratory teaching a rewarding experience. Techites bridged a large age span as they took over kindergarten classes in finger painting and gave instruction in high school math.

Getting pupils interested in the teaching profession was the goal of Future Teachers of America. They discussed the profession at meetings, and expressed interest in young people by making felt gloves and filling them with candy for children in hospitals.

History Club members designed their year's activity to promote a general interest in history. They planned trips to points of historic interest in the state and conducted roll call broadcasts to commemorate historic events. Social affairs rounded off the calendar.

Baked snails became the diet of strong-stomached French Club members at their Christmas party in Mrs. Bedell's home. Taffy-pulling and a gift exchange were also parts of the program. Members made and sold piggy banks and tote bags for Mardi Gras. Ain Haas, who studied in France last summer, told the members of his experience.

German Club members began their year with plant-potting parties in preparation for Mardi Gras. Their booth offered potted plants and artificial corsages. Mardi Gras sales were so good that participants enjoyed a dinner in the Stockholm House as a bonus for their activities.

Besides the traditional pinata, the Christmas fiesta of the Spanish Club included tacos, tamales, and other south-of-the-border specialties of Mrs. Lagadon. An October picnic in Brookside Park with a pie-eating contest, and Cheryl Harding's account of her trip to Mexico made up other programs of the year.

The Junior Classical League strove to make Latin come alive for the members. Throughout the year the club displayed Latin objects in its showcase in Stuart Hall. For Mardi Gras, the JCL members manned a gypsy fortune-telling booth.

Clubs score in fun, service, honor

For brains, brawn, backbone and honor, four clubs on the Tech campus can fill the need.

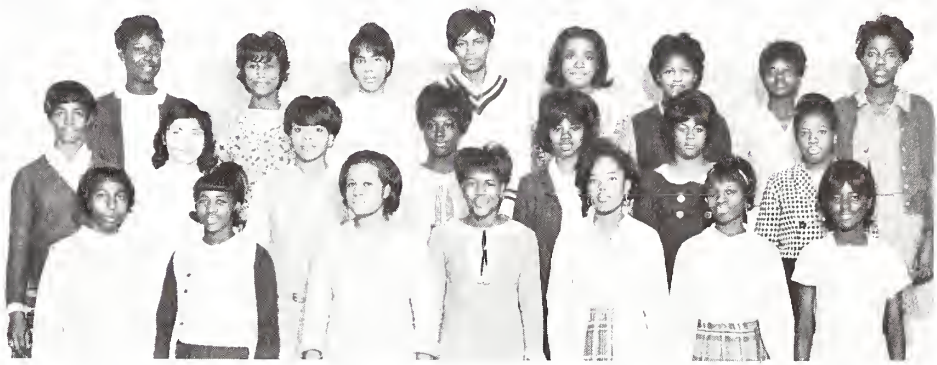

Girls Athletic Association provides intramural volleyball, golf, tennis, bowling, and track. Sponsoring the group this year was Miss Patricia Loftus, exchange teacher from England.

Representing both backbone and brawn, are Tech's athletes who have won the Block T, the Lettermen's Club. Their basketball shot project in the Mardi Gras netted a profit to send cheerleaders to summer camp.

The Y-Teens collected funds for UNICEF at Hallowe'en and sent letters and packages to Vietnam at Christmas.

Key Club, SAO Board log events

Key Club members began their year with the Homecoming half-time show complete with floats and fire-works. The year continued with Christmas bell-ringing at Meadows Shopping Center for the Salvation Army, the spring Turnkey Dance, and the campaign for "Join the Bunch That Walk to Lunch." A milk parade around the Circle in cooperation with the Milk Foundation, marked the end of the year.

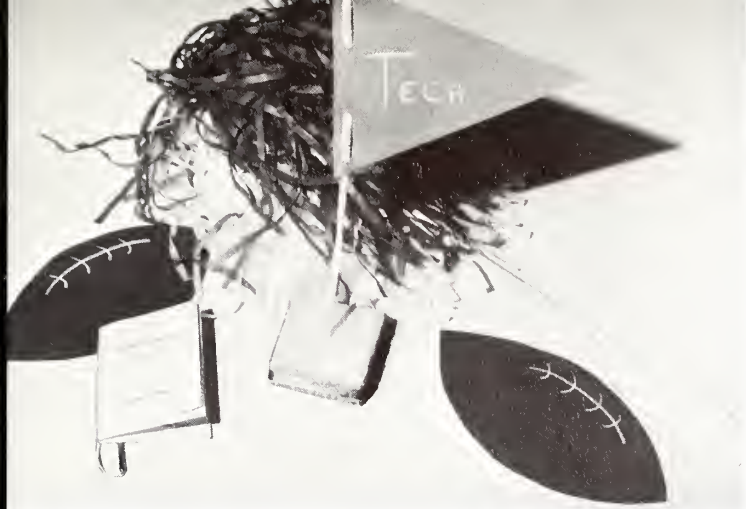

The Student Affairs Organization relied on the talents of its members to sell tickets, prepare dinners and decorate for social affairs as it sponsored the Homecoming Dance and provided four booths for the Mardi Gras. The Christmas Dinner, the Student-Faculty Game and the Campus Clean-up Campaign were other activities of the group.

Clubs serve school, community, world

The Tech Service Club's activities began in September when freshmen found members waiting to help them through their first day. Operating the Mardi Gras C.I.D.E.R. booth, selling Homecoming mums, helping send overseas boxes, filling Christmas baskets, and timing debates were some of the club's fall and winter activities. Spring projects included the faculty Valentine Tea, the Easter help drive and the Clean-up Campaign.

The Human Relations Committee sponsored its annual slogan contest in November and based the year's activities on Steve Ferguson's winning slogan, "Better Human Relations is the Stairway to a Better Tomorrow."

The High School Red Cross spread Tech's influence across the seas by sponsoring school chests for Vietnam. Active in city Chapter House meetings, the members also provided birthday boxes for children's parties.

Library assistants helped to keep the Tech Library running smoothly by working at the desk, checking out books, cleaning the rooms, and repairing and shelving books.

Golf team gets in 'swing' of things

Spring not only brings out the beauties of nature, but also the Titan golf team. The golf clubs are taken from the closet, polished up, and the boys get back in the 'swing' of things. The players polished up their game as they try to reduce the number of strokes to the green.

The '66 golf team, with Phillip Quillin as their coach, accumulated 7 wins, 8 losses this season. A person's golf score can vary greatly from game to game, and the Tech golfers couldn't always hit good scores when they needed them. But several of Tech's victories show the possible strength of the team as they beat Attucks 12-0, Shortridge 11.5-.5, Kennedy 12-0, and Wood 12-0.

Jerry Ferguson, Mike Ensminger, and Frank Renfra, three of the '66 varsity golfers, keep a record of their strokes.

Lack of experience handed the '66 Tech tennis team 9 losses matched with only one win. The Titans lost three in a row before narrowly defeating city rival Howe 3-4, and then dropped the remaining six games.

It was a young team with the majority of the boys being underclassmen. Coach John Eason hoped that these defeats and the experience the boys gained from playing would help them produce a better record in the '67 season.

Mike Gemmill shows the balance needed in returning this served ball.

Slow season for Bat-men

Tech's diamond dwellers, better known as baseball players, struggled through a tough schedule to produce a 4-11 season record. The '66 Titan team lost many games in the field, as costly errors gave their opponents valuable runs.

Tech also lacked an experienced pitcher at the outset of the season. Bill Mansfield developed his pitching skills through the year with Coach Ivan Moreman's assistance. Bill did some pitching for the '67 team and, along with other returning players, hoped to make a big improvement with the new season.

Coach Ivan Moreman

It seems that "first place" was an active thought in the minds of the boys on the '66 Titan track team. The record books show their achievements as they won eight for eight dual meets, took first place in the North Central relays, and beat out school rival Washington by a narrow half-point margin for the city championship.

Besides the team effort, several individual school records were broken. Marion Casey set a new school pole vaulting record by clearing 13' 5.5". A new shot-put mark of 56' 10.25" was set by John Jarret, and Jerry Roth broke the old school records in the mile and two-mile runs. A faster mile relay timing was given by Ron Johnson, Earl Lee, Glen Bentley, and Relix Townsend.

Coached by Carlos Bell, the Titans worked hard to achieve such an outstanding record.

The Titan varsity football team searched all season for the winning touch, but had little success as they lost nine and won only one game. Coach Medcalfe and his boys faced a plague of injuries to the starting team. At one time during the season eleven starting offensive and defensive players were sidelined with injuries. All-State halfback for '65, Jessie Ealy, received leg injuries in the second game and was unable to play the rest of the year. Starting fullback, Bill Mansfield also had leg injuries and saw action in only four games.

With these two key backfield men injured, starting quarterback, Roger Holder, was moved to a running back position, and Junior quarterbacks Ron Rady and Preston Abbott alternated running the team. Also in the backfield were Milton Allen and Dwight Blue. Allen who is only a sophomore did a fine job of filling the shoes of the injured Jessie Ealy. He led the Titans scoring attack with four touchdowns. All the boys were out to win, but inexperience took its toll with the Titans scoring a total of only 65 points while their opponents tallied 296.

Tech's lone victory was held till last, as the Tech gridders dug in to beat Shortridge 6-0 the last game of the season. It was a cold, wet day and the field was mud from goal to goal, but that didn't keep the spirit from climbing to a peak. Time and time again, Fullback, Bill Mansfield, would somehow find footing in the muddy field and bull out long yards. But it was an intercepted pass and run to the 3-yard line by Dwight Blue that set up the Titan touchdown. Two plays later Bill Mansfield crossed the goal line with only 25 seconds remaining in the game. It was an exciting victory for the varsity squad and the Tech fans. This victory added a glamorous touch to an otherwise unlucky football season.

Reserve, frosh prepare for varsity positions

Another season of rough gridiron action passed for the Reserve gridgers and their coaches, Ivan Moreman and Walter Diner. With boys constantly being moved up to fill the varsity injury list, the team never really was settled enough to play good winning ball. Consequently, the season ended with the reserves holding a 2-7 record.

Preparation is a key factor for the reserve footballers, as they look ahead to the tough job of holding varsity positions. Combining with the large number of underclassmen that held varsity spots this year, the reserve Titans show signs of bringing Tech a great season in 1967.

The Freshman gridgers showed hopeful glimpses of Tech's future chalking up five wins, three losses, and one tie. The boys tackled the job of adjusting to the rugged game and shaping into a strong team. Steve Funk, at the helm showed enough potential as quarterback to appear with the varsity in the Shortridge game. Operating behind the quarterback were Jack Harmon at halfback and Vic Breland at fullback. Both these boys played a big part in getting Tech on the score-board. Harmon's hard running paid off as he pulled frosh high scoring honors with five touchdowns. Another key scorer for the frosh was end Bob Beatty. Passes from Funk to Beatty often were rewarded with T.D.'s. Coaches looked to the frosh team for future varsity personnel.

During the fall season, very few days went by that the Tech harriers couldn't be found running across the campus. Mile after mile was covered, all in preparation for the two mile races that compose the sport cross-country.

With coaches Bruce McGeath and

Fred McCoy pushing the boys on, the team won two of three dual meets, had three second places in triple meets, and placed third of 24 in the Columbus Invitational. Leading the team was senior Bob Teckenbrock backed by a goodly number of persistent hard runners.

For the second year in a row, Tech's frosh runners gained attention by carrying the Titan banner high against state competition. They showed great promise as they raced to a first place of 14 teams in the Columbus Freshman Invitational.

In rough city competition Tech's wrestling team produced two city champions, two runners-up in the city meet, and two sectional winners. Calvin Hardesty and Steve Dildine pushed by their opponents to take honors as city champs in their respective weight classes. The Titan city runners-up were Barry Hammond and Edmund Davis.

In sectional competition Calvin Hardesty again emerged victorious along with Louie Clark. Both boys were defeated in the regional meet.

"Titan team! Sure looks good to me! Hey, hey, hey!" Tech's varsity cheerleaders encouraged all Tech fans to cheer the Titans to victory.

The varsity five with the help of the reserves, never failed to get the fans' attention as they kneeled to form their human pyramid. And it was a breathless crowd that watched the girls collapse to the floor, but walk away unharmed. The group was sponsored by Mrs. Mary Lou Manka.

The 1966-67 Titan basketball team followed right in the steps of last year's State Runner-up team and gave the Tech fans another season of thrills. Completing the year with a 23-4 record, the boys again took the Sectional crown, but bowed out of the enticing state tournament at the hands of Shortridge in the final game of Regionals.

The basketball season was a thriller from beginning to end as the city competition gave the Titans reason to be on the ball. In the second game of the schedule, Tech battled neck to neck with Southport through one overtime and finally beat the southsiders in the second overtime.

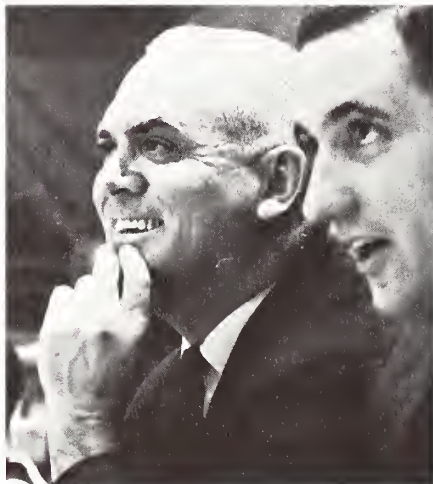

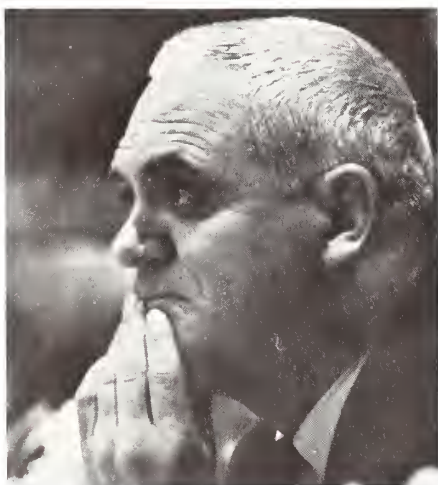

One of the most heart-breaking moments for Techites was the loss to Shortridge in the city tournament. It was the final game of the city meet and the teams were evenly matched for four quarters. Three overtimes later, Shortridge came out on top, defeating the Titans 82-77. The following week, Tech again played Shortridge and took revenge on the Blue Devils by beating them 67-54.

In sectional competition, Tech defeated Broad Ripple who earlier in the season had beat the Titans by one point. Attucks and Washington then fell to the Titans and another Sectional title belonged to Tech. The following week-end in Regionals Tech trounced Plainfield but was outscored by Shortridge in the evening game as the Tech players couldn't find the bucket for an entire half.

The highest scoring average for the team belonged to Gerald Sears, and following close behind was Jim Price. Doing a strong job of rebounding was senior Ross Furry and underclassmen Nathan Appleton and Roland Richardson. All the boys on the team played to win, and it was evident as the Titans, under Coach Jack Bradford, kept up that winning tradition.

Competition was plentiful as the freshman hardwooders had a hard time convincing several teams that they weren't losers.

It was Coach Ernest Cline's job to choose his players from the many that tried to make the team, and then to mold them into an organized ball-club. Several boys advanced to the reserve team before the season was over. For them next year could hold another step up the ladder as Tech athletes.

Athletes, fans bring honor to Tech

Many factors characterize the Athletic Department at Tech. The outstanding athletes and their will to compete are the major assets, but other items complete the picture: hardworking coaches, always behind the boys; the high-spirited school body cheering for victory; the majorettes, pep band, and cheerleaders devoting their time and talents to the athletic events.

The reward is great for all. The trophies pictured on this page are only symbolic of the Titan victories. It's a great honor to receive such awards. But the school spirit, deep pride, and feeling of having accomplished something far exceed the value of the trophies.

Along with victory, is defeat. To accept defeat in a good, sportsman-like manner is an accomplishment, in itself.

 One by one, after being hypnotized, these eight panel members are changing their names. With their new identities, they carry on a discussion of President Lincoln, from the viewpoints of famous people of the Civil War period. The audience is made up of history classes observing the Great Emancipator's birthday.

Open House brings many interested parents to Tech to check up. Mr. Rowland Leverenz brings out his grade book for their benefit.

625,000 Square Feet of Progress

Another new RCA Victor plant...

Another landmark in Indiana's prosperity picture

When all the latest statistics are in on economic growth in Indiana, you'll find RCA re-writing the record books. Shown above is the new Rockville Road plant west of Indianapolis—part of a $68 million expansion program that is making RCA loom larger than ever on the Hoosier map (the proof is on the right).

How does Indiana benefit from RCA's success story? To the tune of $140 million in annual wages and salaries. Not to mention the $75 million worth of Indiana goods and services RCA buys each year.

Is RCA a good place to work? Well, 25,000 Hoosiers seem to think so. And that total is growing. RCA offers good pay, challenging work and a bright future in one of the nation's most dynamic industries. But don't take our word for it—ask a friend or relative who works at any of the five Indiana plants about the exciting opportunities available at RCA.

Investigate employment opportunities with RCA. Send resume to Manager, Employment, 501 N. LaSalle St., Indianapolis, Indiana 46201.
